Laurence Radford (Fellow c. 1349-1361)

Evidence in the archives suggests that Laurence Redford had been a Fellow of University College since c.1349, and was still there in 1361.

He had been instrumental in negotiating the purchase of the Gonwardby estates in 1359/61 (see UC:E2/5/2D/9-17). He held various benefices, including at Selby Abbey, York, from 1349, Meppersham, Berks., to 1374, and St. Andrews, Holborn, London, to 1374/5. His will was dated 10 Aug 1375, and proved on 30 Nov of the same year. In his will, he left money to the College.

UC:S12/1D/1 Tuesday before St. Peter ad vincula 30 Edw III (26 Jul 1356)

William Smith (UC:AR2/MS1/10 p. 31) said of this item "Ex charta omni ex parte evanida seu pallida antequam fuit per me aquâ gallarum delinita" ("from a charter totally faded or pale before it was daubed with water of gall by me"). The effects of the gall are still there, with the paradoxical result that Smith's transcript (ibid. pp. 31-32) is now easier to read.
