

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OXFORD

Stipendiary Lectureship in Ancient History

Salary: £18,341 - £20,628 p.a. (depending on experience)

OVERVIEW OF THE POST

Applications are invited for a Stipendiary Lectureship in Ancient History, tenable for nine months from 1 April 2020 (or as soon thereafter as possible) to 31 December 2020. The post-holder will undertake a stint of eight hours of tutorials per week for University College, averaged over two eight-week terms.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

About University College

Founded in 1249, University College (Univ) is the oldest of the 38 colleges of Oxford University. Like all the colleges, it is an independent, self-governing establishment that functions both as an academic institution and as a social and residential centre for its members. The College currently has approximately 370 undergraduate and 230 graduate students. Most of the core subjects on offer at Oxford University can be studied at University College.

Among the Fellows of the College are nine Professorial Fellows, some thirty-two Tutorial Fellows, thirty-two Supernumerary Fellows and up to ten Junior Research Fellows at any one time. In addition, the College employs some forty Stipendiary and Non-Stipendiary Lecturers who have a range of teaching responsibilities. The Governing Body of the College, which has overall responsibility for all aspects of the running of the College, comprises the Master (the head of the College) together with the Tutorial and Professorial Fellows. The current Master is Sir Ivor Crewe, formally the Vice-Chancellor of Essex University and a distinguished political scientist.

Classics at University College

The College currently has two Tutorial Fellows in Classics. Dr William Allan teaches Classical Languages and Literature and Dr Lisa Kallet teaches Ancient History. The College also has a Supernumerary Fellow in Ancient History, Dr Christopher de Lisle. Dr Kallet is on sabbatical leave during Trinity Term 2020 and Michaelmas Term 2020. The post-holder will work under the administrative supervision of the Senior Tutor, Dr Andrew Bell.

Teaching

This post has been created to replace Dr Kallet's duties during a fixed period of sabbatical leave. The post-holder will undertake a stint of eight hours of tutorials per week for University College, averaged over two eight-week terms. The post-holder may by agreement with the college undertake a limited amount of paid teaching elsewhere in the Collegiate University.

Since the College meets some of its teaching needs via exchange arrangements with other colleges, some of these hours are likely to be spent teaching undergraduates from other colleges. The post-holder will teach undergraduates in tutorials (normally 2, but sometimes 3 undergraduates) and small college classes (up to 5-8 undergraduates).

Tutorials consist of an hour of academic discussion between tutor and students. Tutorial and class teaching also includes the marking of submitted essays and other exercises.

For details about the Faculty of Classics and the syllabus, see the Faculty website: <http://www.classics.ox.ac.uk/>. Details of the undergraduate syllabus are available here: <http://www.classics.ox.ac.uk/new-undergraduate.html>.

We expect the appointee to teach:

- Special subjects in Ancient History for Mods (Greek, Roman, or both);
- Texts and Contexts;
- A minimum of three Ancient History papers for Greats (Greek, Roman, or both)

Other College duties

The postholder will be required to:

- participate in the annual undergraduate admissions process;
- participate in the administration of Classics and joint schools in the College;
- undertake pastoral duties in relation to undergraduate and graduate students in Classics and joint schools at University College;
- set and mark termly college examinations for undergraduates (these are known as 'collections');
- hold start-of-term and end-of-term meetings with the undergraduates, and attend students' termly progress reviews at University College;
- advise on students' paper choices;
- co-ordinate students' tuition for modules taught outside the college;
- teach some of their hours for other Oxford colleges as part of a reciprocal teaching arrangement, where appropriate;
- take part in Open Days at University College;
- attend College events for undergraduates and graduates;
- attend the annual academic progress reviews with the Master and the Dean of Graduates and act as College advisor to graduate students if invited to do so.
- undertake related duties in respect of the College's undergraduate and graduate students in Classics and joint schools.

SELECTION CRITERIA

1. A doctorate in Ancient History, or being close to obtaining one;
2. A record of successful teaching within the field of appointment. The selection committee recognises that the successful candidate may have little or no experience of small-group tutorial teaching. Evidence of relevant training may be an advantage;
3. A willingness to provide pastoral support to undergraduate students within the College;

4. A willingness to accept a role in the administration of Classics and joint schools at the college;
5. A strong research record or research potential within the field of appointment.

TERMS OF APPOINTMENT

The stipend will be in the range £18,341 - £20,628 (depending on experience) per annum. This is a fixed-term post for nine months only.

The following additional benefits are available at University College:

- Lunch and dinner in the Senior Common Room free of charge throughout the academic year, except when the kitchens are closed.
- Membership of USS pension scheme.
- Shared use of a teaching room.
- Occasional access to small conference grant.

APPLICATION PROCEDURE

Applications should be sent to Dr Ian Boutle, Academic Registrar, University College, Oxford, OX1 4BH; e-mail recruitment@univ.ox.ac.uk by 12 noon (UK time) on Friday 20 March 2020, and should include:
